Parents of Children with Learning Differences Support Group

Parenting is never easy, but it can be more complex for parents of students with learning disabilities and differences. Parents often feel alone in the journey of parenting a child with an “invisible disability.” But you are not! Tilden’s unique peer-to-peer parent support group facilitated by Tilden Director Laurie Kumar and guest Rebecca Hawley provides an avenue for parents to discuss the trials and tribulations of parenting a preteen/teen with a learning difference. The group is open to current Tilden parents and parents of teens who do not attend Tilden alike and is free of charge. Parents can enter the group anytime and do not need to commit to all sessions. We intend to create an ongoing space for parents to share their stories, experiences, and resources with facilitation by an expert in the field who is also a parent of a young adult with a learning disability.

Previous sessions of the group have covered topics such as:

- Executive Functioning Support
- Picking and Choosing Your Battles
- Neurodiversity
- Peer-to-Peer Resources
